

Instructor: Date:

Learner: Regional Branch:

Program: Center:

CONTENT

- Let's Start! • Let's Explore! • Let's Practice! • Extension Activity • Target Words • Learning Points

Let's Start!

Getting ready to face the public.

Learning Outcome

Exchange information about people's interests and backgrounds using a wider range of language.

Ask your partner:

- How do you feel before a public presentation?
- Are you able to relate personally with an audience? Why or why not?

Can Do Statements

- I can prepare a presentation by organizing points.
- I can describe feelings and impressions about an event.
- I can express opinions.

Let's Explore!

Do Miranda and Janet need to do a run-through?

* To "run-through" something means to practice it before.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Rocco: I get the impression you find this press conference nerve-racking.
Janet: Honestly, I've never been so nervous about a press conference before.
Miranda: Me neither. This one is somehow different. More personal.
Rocco: Personal. Hang onto that word, Miranda. I want to talk through some steps in preparing for a press conference. The first point is to come up with a list of adjectives to describe the company. For instance, what is the image you are wanting to project?
Miranda: Personal is good!
Janet: Sensitive and caring?
Rocco: As far as I'm concerned, that won't be believable. Not when you're seen as supporting human rights abuses. How did you feel at the news?
Miranda: Troubled, distressed ...
Janet: Shocked, appalled ...
Rocco: I'd say that's better. Secondly, come up with one main point you want your audience to hear and stick with it.
Janet: We want to help the community of Shalopolis.
Rocco: I'm not sure the public will find that credible.
Janet: It's true.
Miranda: Janet, how about: We are outraged about being deceived and made complicit in human rights abuses?
Rocco: I find that an big improvement. Now, choose your main speaker and one person to answer questions.
Janet: Miranda, I think you'd do better than I would. And, to be honest, I don't trust Farmani.
Rocco: Next, create the story. I mean, tell what is happening in a way that people will find personable and relatable. Then, come up with a list of questions you may be asked and your responses.
Miranda: That's some real preparation for us Janet!
Rocco: And don't forget to do a mock run-through.

Let's Practice!

Match the personality vocabulary.

Instructions: Read the meanings in each sentence. Match each meaning to the word.

Meaning

1. concerned by something
2. something you can connect with
3. very upset
4. shocked about something
5. believed or trusted
6. very stressful
7. a pleasant manner
8. able to affect you

Word

- a. nerve-racking
- b. distressed
- c. personal
- d. troubled
- e. credible
- f. personable
- g. appalled
- h. relatable

Let's Practice!

Rocco organizes his thoughts.

Instruction: Read the sentences. Complete the sentences with the words from the Word Bank.

Word Bank

Responses / come up with / relatable / a mock / the image /
personable / audience

1. The first point is to _____ a list of adjectives to describe the company.
2. For instance, what is _____ you are wanting to project?
3. Secondly, come up with one main point you want your _____ to hear and stick with it.
4. Next, explain what is happening in a way that people will find _____ and _____.
5. Then, come up with a list of questions you may be asked and your _____.
6. Don't forget to do _____ run-through.

Extension Activity

Let's be honest about how we feel.

Instructions: Complete the following steps. Fill in the Self-Assessment.

- Invent a work situation that you might have a strong opinion and feelings about.
- Write down adjectives that describe your feelings and impressions about the situation.
- Write several sentences that describe your opinions, using expressions that demonstrate certainty and uncertainty.
- Read your impressions and opinions to your partner.
- Talk about your opinions and impressions about the other person's situation.

Self-Assessment

Yes

No

I describe my feelings and impressions about a particular work situation.

☐ ☐

I express certainty and uncertainty about a particular work situation.

☐ ☐

I write my impressions and opinions.

☐ ☐

I share my impressions and opinions with a partner.

☐ ☐

Target Words

- personal (adjective): able to affect you as a person
e.g. This one is somehow different. More personal.
- appalled (adjective): shocked about something terrible
e.g. I felt appalled at the news.
- believable (adjective): having a quality that can be believed e.g. As far as I'm concerned, that won't be believable.
- distressed (adjective): very upset and worried
e.g. I was distressed at hearing that we are complicit with child labor.
- troubled (adjective): concerned by something wrong
e.g. I felt troubled at hearing we are complicit with child labor.
- relatable (adjective): having a quality that you can connect with e.g. Tell what is happening in a way that people will find relatable.

Learning Points

Expressing Opinions

Expressing an opinion is different than stating a fact. You may believe something or have a strong feeling about it based on your understanding. However, you need to communicate that your opinion is just your own and that others may feel or believe differently.

There are certain expressions which are used to indicate that you are about to express your opinion.

By prefacing (giving a short introduction before) your opinion you will appear to be open to other people's ideas while letting others consider your own. These may be expressed positively or negatively, with certainty or uncertainty, depending on how you feel. You will notice that most of the expressions are neutral - they do not express certainty or uncertainty, which is usual in expressing opinions. However, there are times you will want to indicate a strong opinion or that you really have not made up your mind.

Depending on your tone of voice, or the rest of your sentence, the same expressions can sometimes indicate a different degree of certainty.

Certainty	Neither Certain nor Uncertain	Uncertainty or Hesitation
I am sure/certain/believe ...		I'm not sure/certain, but ...
I say ...	I would/wouldn't say ...
As far as I'm concerned ...	I get/have the feeling ...	I get/have the feeling ...
	I get/have the impression ...	I have the impression ...
Honestly/Truthfully/To be honest ...	It seems/looks to me ...	It seems/looks to me ...
I find/don't find that ...	I find/don't find that ...
	I'm not sure that ...
	I think/don't think ...
In my opinion/view/eyes ...	In my opinion ...
	I sense that ...

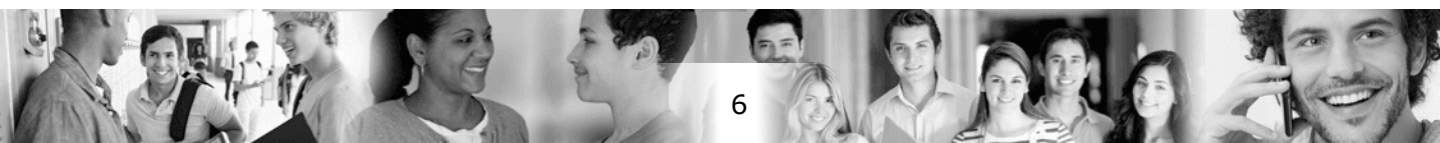

Examples:

Learning Points

- I sense that you are feeling uncomfortable.
- I'm not sure but I think that the market has changed.
- In my opinion, that is not a very good idea.
- I'm not sure that your argument is going to be convincing like that.
- It looks to me like we're moving forward.
- I find that the restaurant is not very clean.
(stating a fact about the restaurant declares certainty)
- I find the menu appealing.
(stating a personal taste for something does not indicate that others will find it appealing, so it is a neutral statement)

Learning Points

Using Adjectives with '-ing' and '-ed' to Describe Feelings and Impressions

Sometimes we get an overall sense of a situation, which is called an impression. An impression gives a feeling. Strong emotions about something are also called feelings. We use adjectives to describe these feelings and impressions. Very often the adjective is formed by adding an 'ed' or 'ing' to the verb that is used to cause these emotions, but not always.

Both the verbs to be and feel can be used with these adjectives.

Using to be makes the statement a little stronger and more personal. It makes the adjective seem more emotional.

Using the adjective after feel makes the feeling more of an impression. For instance: 'I am distressed' is more emotional and personal than 'I feel distressed'.

Verb	Adjective	Adjective
The film excites me.	I am/feel excited .	The film is exciting .
The news disturbs us.	We are/feel disturbed .	The news is disturbing .
This meeting bore s me.	I am/feel bored .	The meeting is boring .
This situation confuses me.	I am/feel confused .	This situation is confusing .
That music racks my nerves!	That music is nerve-racking .	NOTE - It's not correct to say: I am/feel nerve-racked .

There are other adjectives of feeling as well, and they may carry endings such as 'ive' or 'able'.

I am/feel sensitive about that. I am/feel apprehensive. I feel horrible.

